

Biograms

Janusz Barański – Professor at the Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology at the Jagiellonian University. His research interests concern theory and methodology in anthropology, cultural theory, anthropological aesthetics, museology and cultural heritage studies. His most recent research has been conducted in the Polish Spisz region.

Monika Golonka-Czajkowska – Professor at the Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology at the Jagiellonian University and the chair of Section of Ethnography Documentation and Information. Her research interests lie in anthropology of politics, collective memory practices, anthropology of the archives and critical heritage studies. Most recently, she has led a project on social imaginations about World War II, the postwar period and the Political Transformation in Poland.

Kaja Kajder – lecturer at the Institute of Religious Studies and staff member of Section of Ethnography Documentation and Information at the Jagiellonian University. Her research interests focus on the practices of collective memory and processes of constructing heritage related to World War II, the postwar period and Shoah.

Jan Kajfosz – associate professor at the Institute of Culture Studies, University of Silesia in Katowice (Poland) and at the Department of Sociology, University of Ostrava (Czech Republic). His research interests concern magical thinking, cognitive anthropology, and social construction of the past and of the collective identities.

Łukasz Łoziński – philologist and cultural anthropologist conducting research on the borderline of anthropology and history, especially in the field of World War II and the postwar period.

Dariusz Nikiel – ethnographer and cultural anthropologist. PhD candidate at the Faculty of History of the Jagiellonian University, Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology. His research interests focus on the areas of the anthropology of memory, anthropology of war and the relationship between oral history and ethnography. He is preparing his doctoral dissertation entitled Facing the Past: Witness of History and the Commemoration Practices of the “Cursed Soldiers”.

Dariusz J. Piwowarczyk – member of the Society of Divine Word (SVD). Missionary experience and fieldwork among the Aché Indians of Paraguay (1992–1996, 1997, 2000). M.A. in cultural anthropology from the University of Wrocław (1983) and from the Catholic University of America (CUA) in Washington, DC (1996); PhD in cultural anthropology from the CUA (2002) and the postdoctoral degree (habilitation) in social anthropology from the University of Fribourg, Switzerland (2016). He has taught social sciences at the Divine Word College in Epworth, IA, USA (2002–2006). Professor of Cultural Anthropology at Philosophisch-Theologische Hochschule (PTH) in Sankt Augustin (later KHKT in Cologne), Germany (2010–2020). Visiting professor at the University of Cracow (2010–to present). Fields of research: socio-cultural aspects of German colonialism in Africa and Oceania (1884–1918), Indigenism in Latin America, cultural history of the German Kaiserreich, social theory.

Marta Raczyńska-Kruk – Senior Assistant at the Faculty of Geography and Regional Studies, University of Warsaw. Ph.D. in the discipline of culture and religion sciences; graduated at the Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology, Jagiellonian University. Her research interests include, among others, practices of genealogical memory in contemporary Poland and the role of historical narrative in the formation of regional identities (the case of the Deaf Germans/Głuchoniemcy in the Carpathian Foothills).

Grzegorz Studnicki – associate professor at the Institute of Culture Studies, University of Silesia in Katowice (Poland) and member of the Ethnographic Department of the Museum of Cieszyn Silesia (pol. Śląsk Cieszyński). His scientific interests focus on social memory, contemporary contexts of tradition, as well as ethnography and cultural heritage of Cieszyn Silesia.

Anna Szolucha – the principal investigator of the ARIES project at the Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology, Jagiellonian University. Her research interests include space anthropology, resource extraction, energy, social movements and democracy.

Stanisława Trebunia-Staszal – Professor at the Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology at the Jagiellonian University, ethnologist, university teacher, regional activist. Director of the Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology and head of the Postgraduate Museum Studies of the Jagiellonian University. Her research focuses on ethnography of the Carpathians regions (Poland, Slovakia, Romania), anthropology of war, cultural heritage and museology. Vice-chairwoman of the Scientific Council of the Podhale Association “Związek Podhalań”.